to climb over it and into the road, while a hundred biazing cannon poused death-deating missiles into their devoted ranks.

"Now and here was given to the world the grandest exhibition of discipline and endarance, of coolness and courage under a withering fire, ever recorded in military history—a scene which has made the story of Pickett's charge the glory of American arms. There in the road, with the deafening explosion of unnumbered shells filling the air, their ranks ploughed through and through again and again by the fiery hall which the batteries from the heights beyond were pouring into them, amid all this terrific roar and the not less disconcerting cries of the wounded and dying they heard the command of their company officers: 'Halt, men!' Form line.' Fall in' Hight dress!'

INVEIGLED INTO A MARRIAGE.

Husband Answers Suit for Separation With Strange Allegation.

Immediate marriage, to which Fay says he finally consented.

He mays that Nellie would not live with him and that she and her aum got all his money from him every week, and made him take his lunch to work and allowed him only enough each to pay his way to and from the navy ward. He even had to ask for that, he say? He accuses his wife of kicking at him and of striking him with the metal edge of her pocketbook.

Hobert Greer, whole return from South America was incidental to the marriage, deposes that Nellie said she did not like her aged husband; that all she wanted was his money, and that if she did not get that she money, and that if she did not get that she would harmt him all his life, notwithstanding the noise it made. It was "found and fury signifying nothing." The thunder of the conflict was plainly heard forty miles away.

But the men in the ranks understood elearly the desperate, hopless character of the movement, and along the lines many of them were heard in subdued voices calling "good-by" to comrades and friends. Yet, with their rifles carried easily at a right-shoulder shift, they moved onward with a light, elastic step, as steadily as if on a grand twice. As Scales's brigade passed General Lee he noticed that some of the men were bloody handinges, having been wounded in the previous day's fighting, and he expressed himself feelingly in their behalf.

tion With Strange Allegation.

New York, May 24.—The Supreme Court, special term, has deried the application of Nellie Fay for alimony and counsel fee in her suit against John Fey for a separation on the ground of cruelty. John is a veteran of the Civil War and an employe of the navy yard. He is 52 years old, and his wife is not more than 20. He says he was inveigled into a marriage that he did not wish to contract.

In an affidavit he telis a story of a jollification at the home of the brother of his friend. Robert Greer. Mrs. Fay, then Miss Greer, sang a love song, and Fay states that some banter was exchanged, connecting him with her as a sultor.

He declares that this affair made no imprension upon him, but that, a few days later, he was visited by a clerk from a lawyer's office and served with a notice to call and explain why be did not marry the girl. He did call, and he says the lawyer told him he would have nothing to do with the case. Later the girl insisted that he should marry her, and he said that he was willing, but begged her to wait until he had some money saved up, but he declares that Nellie was obdurate and demanded an Immediate marriage, to which Fay says he finally consented.

New York, May 24.-When an employe's services are "not special, unique or extraordinary," he has the right to quit and enter the employment of anybody else, acording to a decision given by Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman. George A. Kessier had asked for an injunction restraining Emanuel S. Chappelle from leaving his service as champagne company. Maurice Meyer of No. 63 Park Row, Chap-
